KIM

If you live in San Francisco and have ever had a complaint about your utility bill, you just may have spoken with a customer-service representative named Kim.

Because her job is handling complaints, it may be a surprise to learn that Kim is one lady that it pays to be shy with. Get pushy, and she'll push right back. Listen to what Kim has to say about her favorite type of man:

"I like the quiet, handsome type. There's something about that kind of guy that is really exciting and intriguing."

PHOTOGRAPHY BY JOHN COPELAND

"I fulfill my favorite fantasy all the time," Kim tells us. "I like to bring out shy men, and I'm really good at it. Sometimes I'll meet a guy who's very quiet, and I'll know that, with the right atmosphere and attention, he'll turn into a real tiger. I love finding guys like that. I guess I like to play temptress. But I'm no tease. If I want a guy, you can bet I follow through."

Besides meeting shy men and changing their lives, this steamy Bay-area resident also loves to travel. "But I don't leave California too often. I don't need to. I mean, after all, we have just about everything within a very short distance. I can hop in my car and visit the beaches or the mountains. Or I can do both—and in the same day, too. San Francisco has plenty of action at night, but if I really want to live it up, I can go take in the action in the casinos up at Lake Tahoe. So, like I said, who needs to leave California?" After looking at Kim, we're thinking of moving there, ourselves.

MARCI

Should uninhibited Marci ever make the big time, stage fright is one thing she won't suffer from. Our gorgeous June centerfold is a fledgling singer-songwriter—that's in addition to her more apparent gifts. "I've sung ever since I can remember," says Marci. "My folks steered me toward serious voice lessons, opera and all, but I always wanted to sing the blues and rock 'n' roll." We can't imagine this gifted twenty-two-year-old blue about anything. In fact, Marci says she usually feels better once she's belted out a song for all it's worth. "Truth is, singing turns me on," says Marci. "Giving myself that way gets all my juices flowing. I don't know how Linda Ronstadt feels, but singing is sexy."

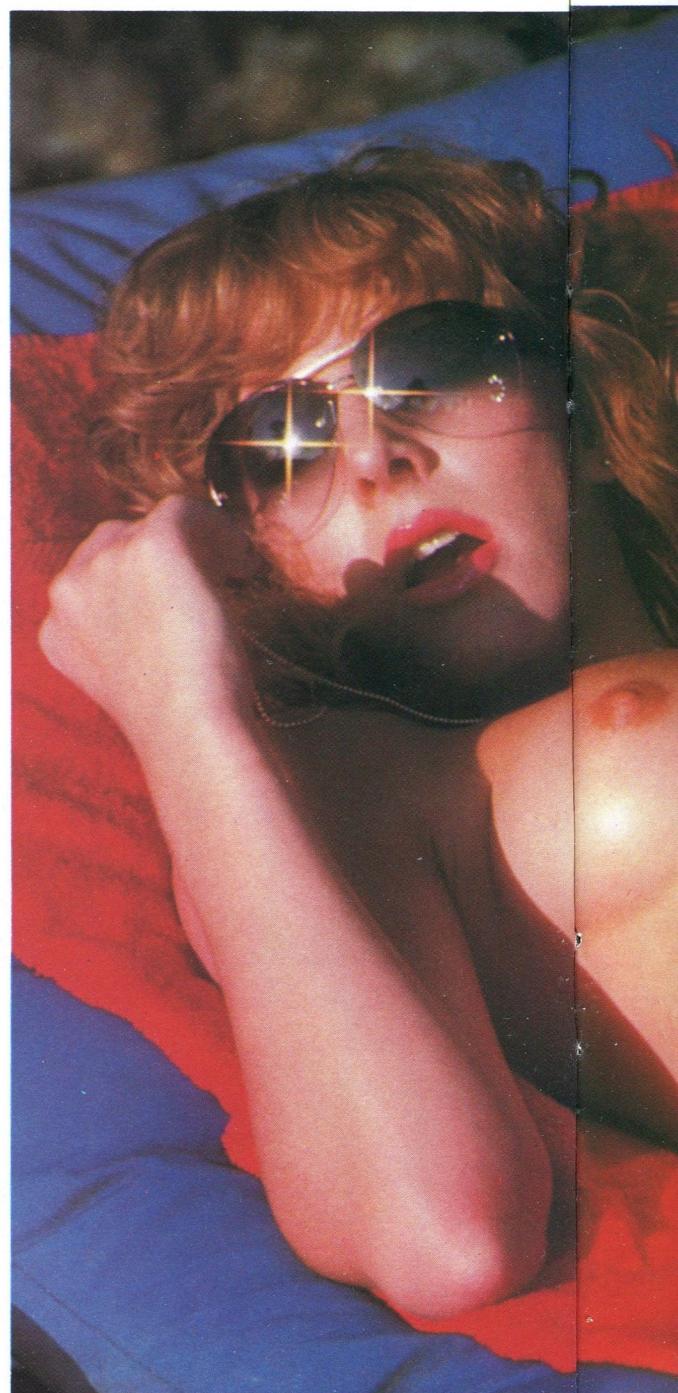

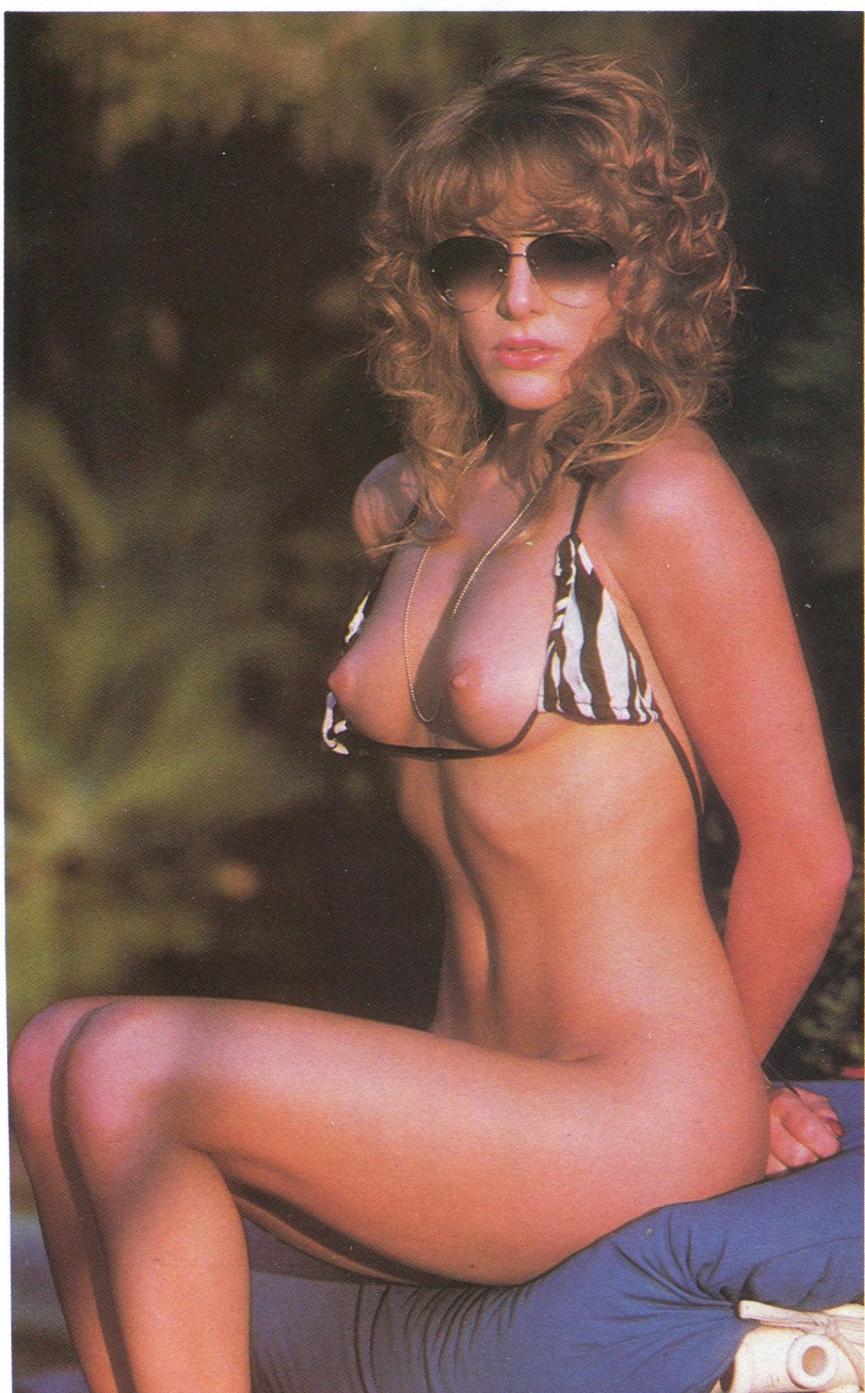

PHOTOGRAPHY BY J. STEPHEN HICKS

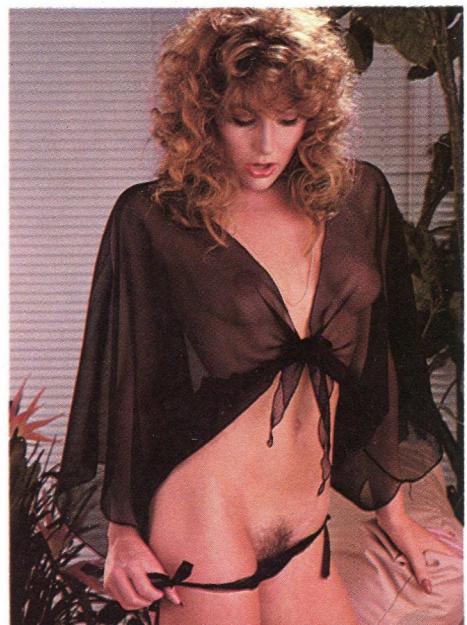

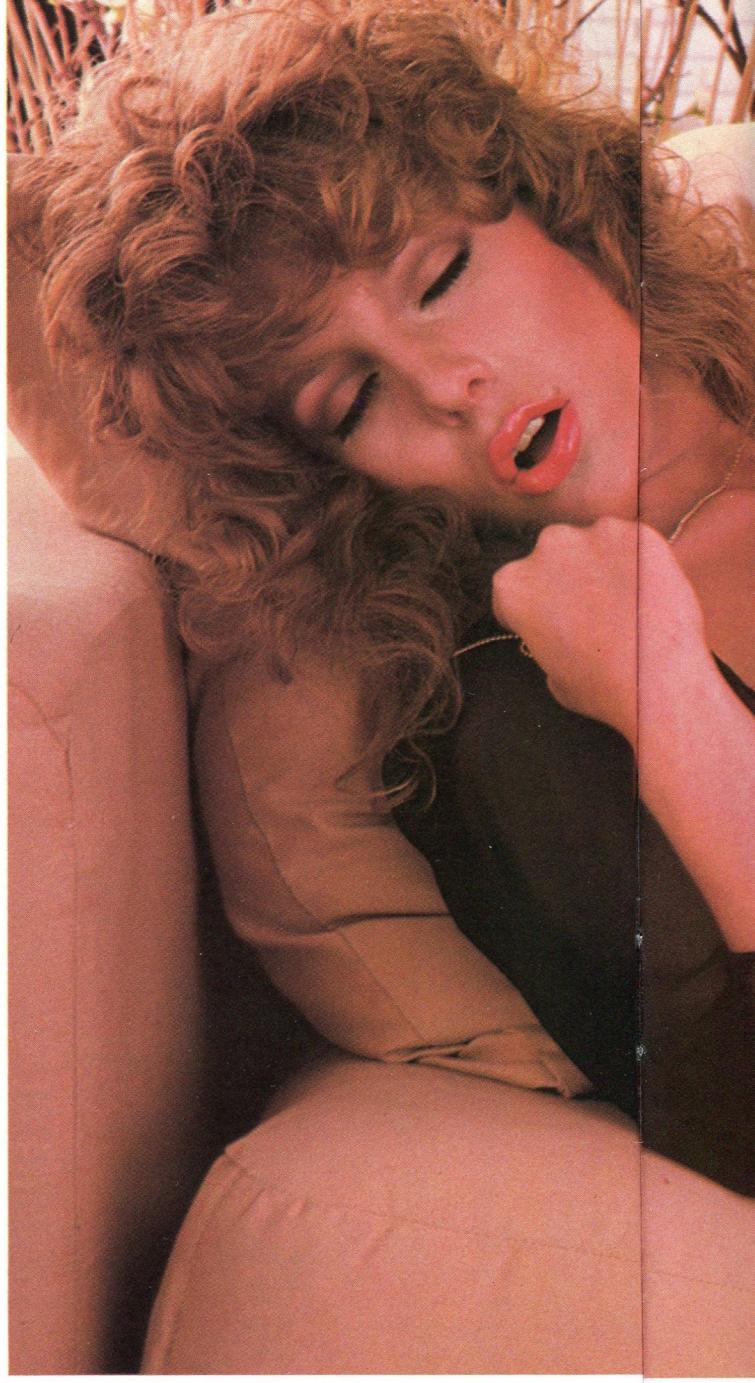

Marci's home is Los Angeles right now—"the toughest place to get a career going, but I've always believed in starting right at the top." When she's not writing and exercising her vocal cords, she's taking good care of her great body. "I'm lucky to have been given a good shape. It's my responsibility to keep it that way. I'm pretty fanatical about eating right and working out. I do everything hard, and, yes, that includes play. Sex is something we all need a lot of—as long as it's mutually giving and gratifying. I spend a lot of time on my career, so when I put aside time for pleasure, it's got to be something special. The kind of guys I like? I get pretty dreamy over blond hair and really great pectorals."

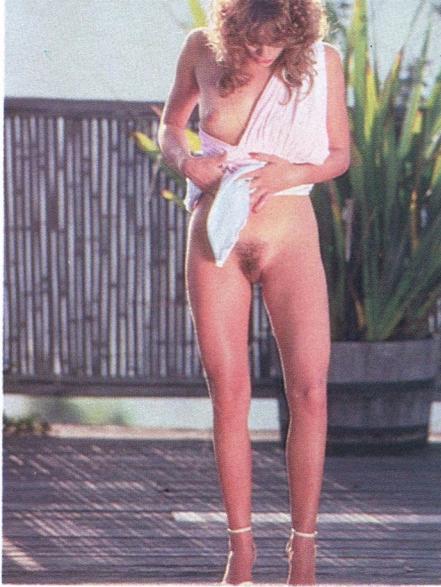

"I don't intend to burn myself out the way so many performers did in the sixties," Marci says. "I'm not into any kind of drug scene, and I never date guys who are. That's just not my idea of a hot evening. My tastes are simple. I guess my biggest vice is sweets—I'm crazy for Italian pastries and chocolates. Maybe I should have sung opera!"

"I love it when men hear me sing, then want to meet me, get to know me. I'm all me up there on that stage, and if they like what they hear, as well as what they see, then I know they want the real thing. Of course, some guys are just suckers for the magic of a great performance—those are the guys for me!"

Her left hand rests on her hip, and her right hand is tucked under her head. The background features large, tropical leaves and flowers, including orange starfish-like blossoms and green ferns. The lighting is soft and warm.

A sexologist was making a door-to-door survey of the sex habits of American married couples. At one home, he questioned a young husband who believed that marriage shouldn't restrict a man's sex life.

"How many times a week do you have sexual intercourse?" asked the sex expert.

"Oh, about twenty times a week," answered the married Romeo.

"And do you talk to your wife while you're having sex?"

"Talk to my wife? How the hell can I fuck and dial a telephone at the same time?"

—Norman Harwood
Burlington, Vermont

Then there was the guy who wanted to get married so badly that he bought TV time to advertise for a wife. He got 51,283 replies—50,740 of them from husbands wanting to give him their wives.

He picked her up in a singles bar and, since he was drunk and wildly horny, didn't notice anything unusual about her. But when they got to her place and went into the bedroom, the girl took off her wig and placed it in a bureau drawer. Then she took out her glass eye and placed it in the bureau drawer. Next, she slipped the falsies out of her bra—into the bureau drawer they went. Then, off came her artificial leg, which the girl placed with the other items she had removed. She hopped to the bed, stretched out, and, smiling seductively, said, "Well, come on, big boy."

The young man, now sober, asked, "Okay, but where do I go, the bed or the bureau drawer?" —Thomas Jones
San Antonio, Texas

The hooker had finished work for the night and hailed a taxi to take her home. But just as the taxi started off, she remembered that all she had was a fifty-dollar bill, and the cabbie wouldn't have change. So she leaned forward and said coyly, "How about taking the fare out in trade?" Then she sprawled in the seat and pulled up her miniskirt. The driver looked, then said, "Ain't you got anything smaller, honey?" —Ted Byers

Chicago, Illinois

The police chief of a small town went into the mayor's office one afternoon and asked, "What should we do with all those filthy books, films, and videotapes my men confiscated from the porno shop?"

"Same as usual," said the mayor. "Divide 'em up—but I get everything where the girls have big tits."

—Larry Gateman
Kansas City, Missouri

Confucius also say, "Virginity is like balloon: One prick and it's gone."

—Todd Brannan

Guy: "I've had it with your teasing. I'm coming over to your place tonight, and I'm going to toss you onto the bed, strip you naked, take out my cock, and ram it into you."

Girl: "Oh, no, you're not!"

Guy: "And I'm going to screw you so hard you won't be able to walk."

Girl: "Oh, no, you're not!"

Guy: "And, what's more, I'm not even going to use a condom."

Girl: "Oh, yes, you are!"

—Dorian W. W. Medd

He had been marooned on a desert island at the age of ten, and for twenty years had not seen a human being. Then he got lucky one day as he walked along the beach. There she was, a beautiful young blonde, naked on the sand, another shipwreck victim.

Later, at his hut, he told her his story. She smiled and asked, "How have you managed all these years?"

"I fish, gather coconuts, berries, and bananas, and dig for clams."

"What do you do for sex?" the blonde asked, leaning toward him.

"Sex? What's sex?"

Pulling him down on top of her, the blonde skillfully proceeded to show the deprived young man. When they had completed their act of intercourse, she asked how he'd liked it.

"Great! But look what you did to my clam-digger."

—Samuel Eigen

Erie, Pennsylvania

The high-school principal caught two boys jerking off in the john. Scowling at them, he said, "If you continue doing that, you'll go blind."

Not exactly terrified, the two boys glanced at each other; then one said, "Well, we'll just do it until we need glasses."

—Shahid Bhatti

Albany, New York

What do you call group therapy for "real men"?

World War II.

Beautiful girl: "Can you tattoo a cat on my knee?"

Horny tattoo artist: "Sure. But we're having a special on giraffes this week."

What is the ultimate sexual insult?

You're jerking off, and your hand falls asleep.

Bride-to-be: "Edward, before we get married, I must confess that I've slept with several other men."

Bridegroom-to-be: "It's okay, honey, you told me about that already."

Bride-to-be: "Yes, but that was last week."

OUR NEW "FRIENDS & LOVERS" MONTHLY WINNER

APRIL COLLINS PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA

We asked April how she felt about posing in the nude for GENESIS. She answered, "It gives me the chance to allow my innermost feelings to flow freely—and to be just a bit naughty." A most unphony reply from what we figured was an independent sort of lady. And, April told us, she has been independent—on her own—since she was seventeen years old, leaving the old homestead for the big city; in this case, Philadelphia. (Hey, all you New Yorkers, yours isn't the only big city.)

Her aim then, as now, was to break into show business, with modeling as a way to get started. Of course, there was that old fact of life called "earning a living," and after several jobs of one type or another over the past few years, April now works as a travel agent.

This gives her the opportunity to fly to New York and California. In case you haven't heard, that's where the show-biz action is.

PHOTOGRAPHY BY MICHAEL WARNOCK

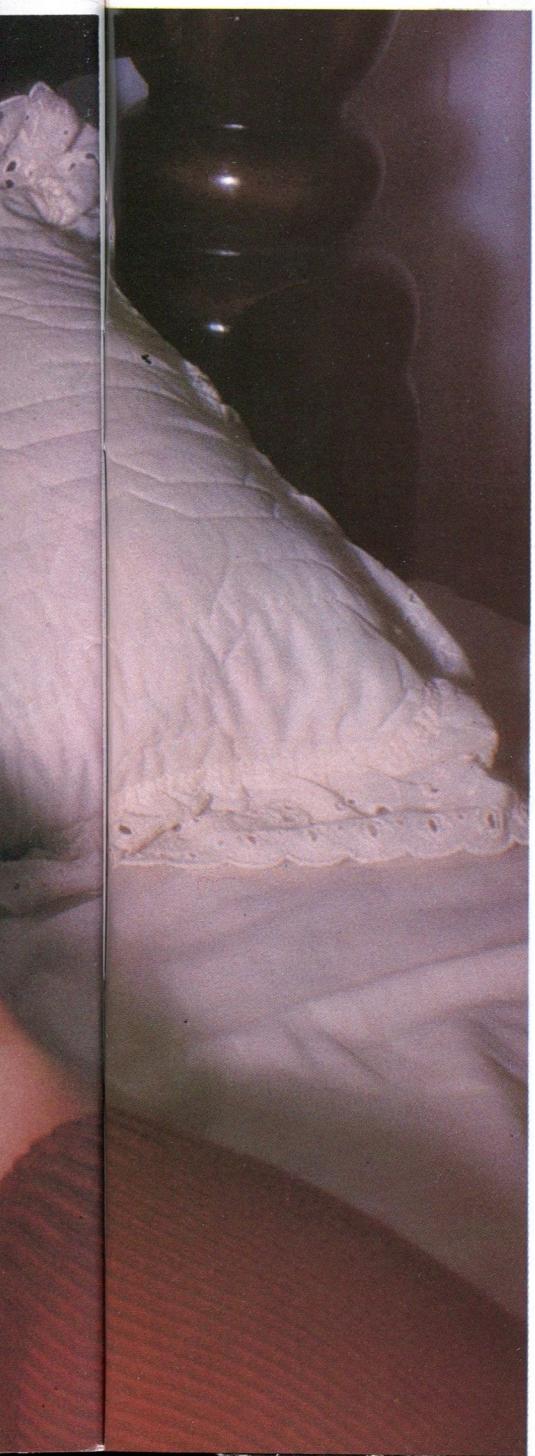

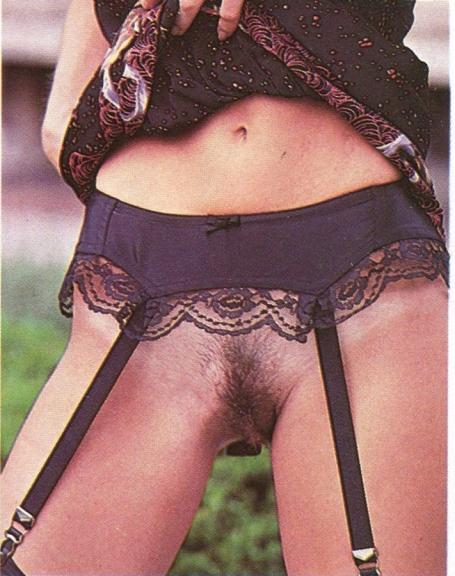

April likes to travel, so it's no chore to hop a jet and just go.
She also enjoys sports, even the more strenuous types—skiing, horseback riding, racquetball, touch football. And we hear she's a pretty rough football player for a mere slip of a girl, only five foot three and ninety-five pounds—fast and tricky.

April's favorite turn-on is skinny-dipping, especially with her boyfriend—or any good man who turns her on.

CATHLEEN

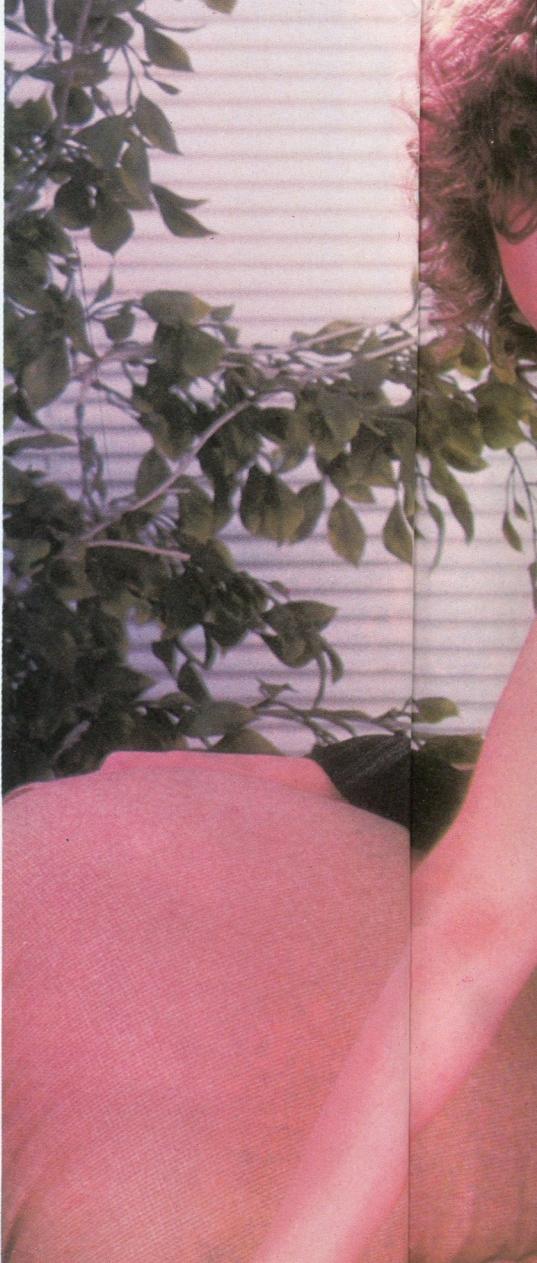

They call her "Cat" because she has green eyes. And Cathleen has other catlike characteristics: She is graceful—due to her natural athletic ability—is standoffish, at first, until she gets to know you; she's playful, and purrs when petted and fussed over. And when Cathleen stares at you with those cool, unblinking, hypnotic green eyes, your mind becomes clouded, you fall into a trancelike state and begin to have mystical, erotic fantasies. Cathleen laughs when she hears fanciful descriptions like that.

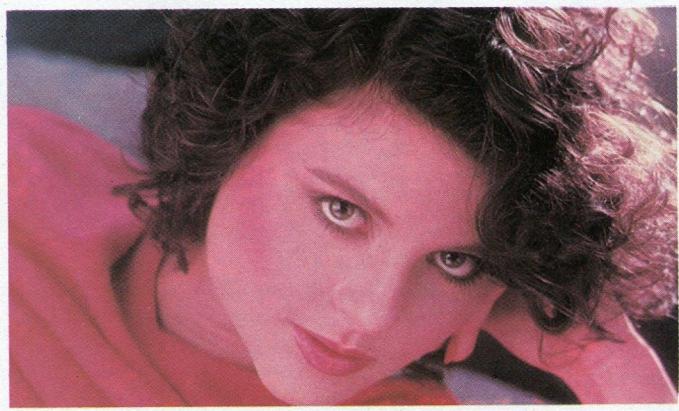

PHOTOGRAPHY BY J. STEPHEN HICKS

"I'm just plain Cathleen—or 'Cat,' if you insist," she tells us. "My green eyes come from my Irish ancestry; I'm not really part cat at all. I don't cast hypnotic spells or give men the evil eye. Maybe it's just because green eyes are unusual that men take special notice of them." Yes, and we'd say that there are a number of special things about Cathleen, like her looking as cute and cuddly as a kitten one moment, then coming across as a sensual, seductive, grown-up cat the next moment. "I do sort of keep men . . . off balance," Cathleen says. "That's catlike, too—unpredictability. It's the way Irish girls are." Cathleen was the only girl in her family, the pet of her father and five older brothers. "I'm not spoiled, surprisingly," she says. "But you'll have to ask my boyfriends to be sure." And you'll have to go to Cathleen's home in New York to ask them.

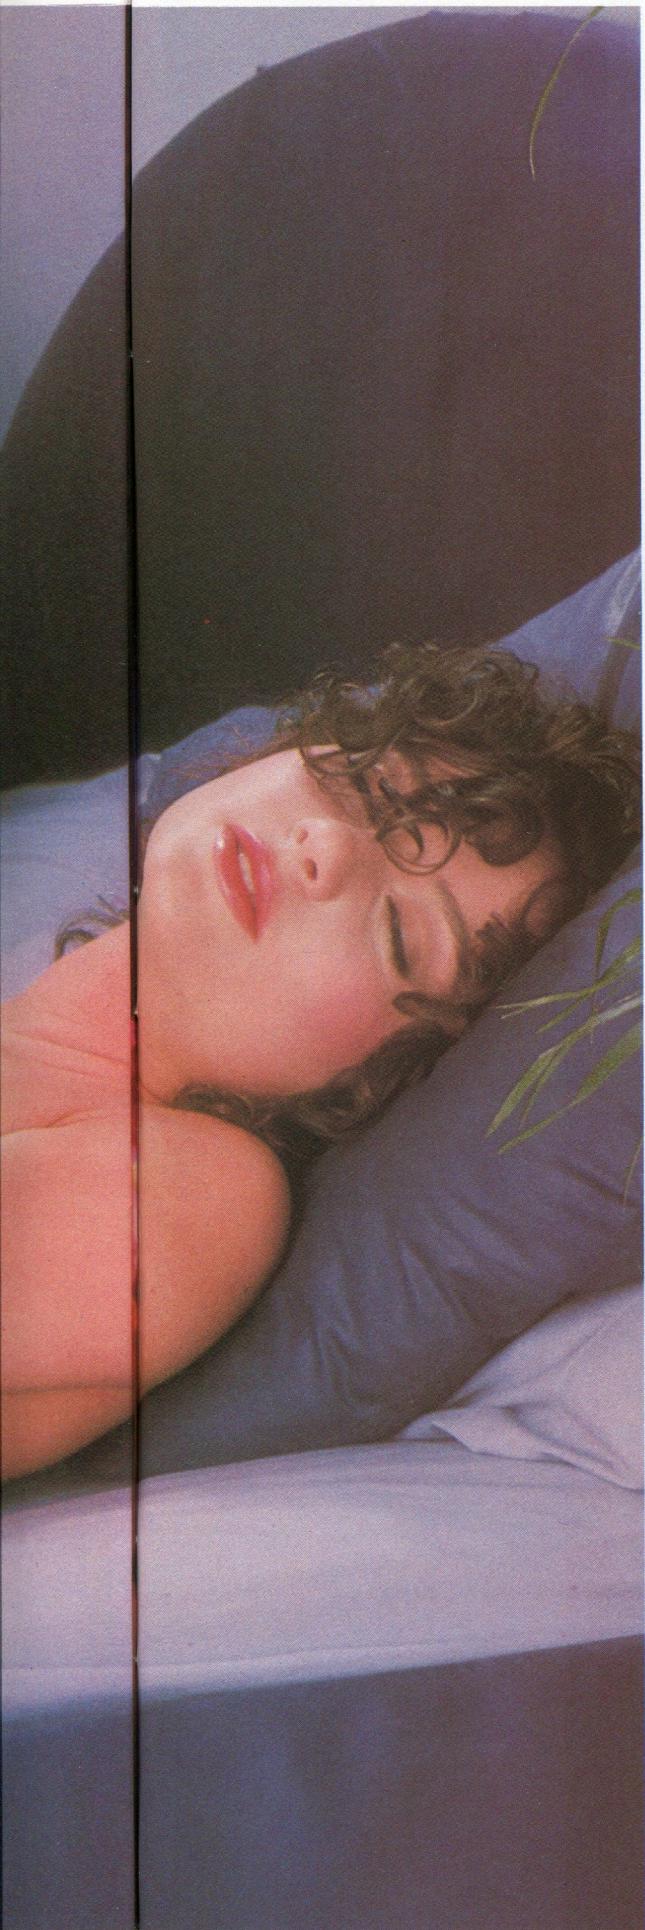

"I left home about a year ago—
home was Weehawken, New Jersey—and I'm studying acting, singing, and dancing. Broadway, here I come!"

Is there a special boyfriend right now?

"No," says Cathleen. "I didn't start dating until I was eighteen—strict mom and dad—so I'm making up for lost time by dating four different guys. Sometimes I feel like a cat living nine lives—but living them all at once."

CHERRY

We discovered delectable Cherry Kaiser deep in the heart of Austin, Texas, where the twenty-three-year-old former college beauty queen lives, loves, and works. "I've always been happiest in Texas," says Cherry. "For one thing, I love the men here. They're the most handsome, manly guys in the whole country. These guys know how a woman likes her loving—wet and wild!" Cherry is a receptionist and, in her free time, a photographer, as well. "I'm concentrating on portraits right now, hoping to get a good portfolio together," she says. "There are so many fabulous faces here, especially the old-timers. I think I like photographing old people best. They're incredibly proud and full of stories. What do I do when I'm not working or taking pictures? I just love being with my current man, cooking up a storm, and making love for hours and hours. My men have big appetites!"

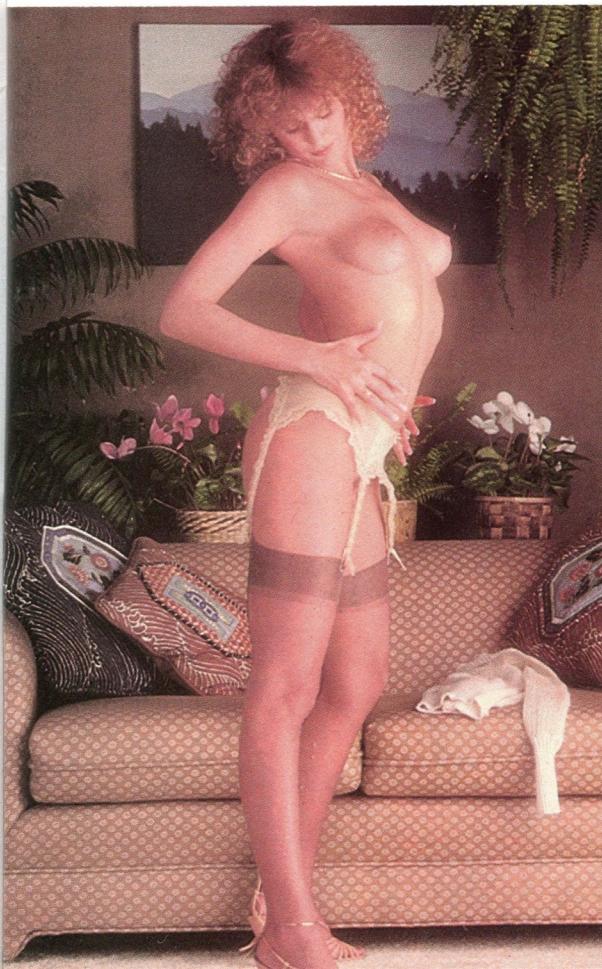

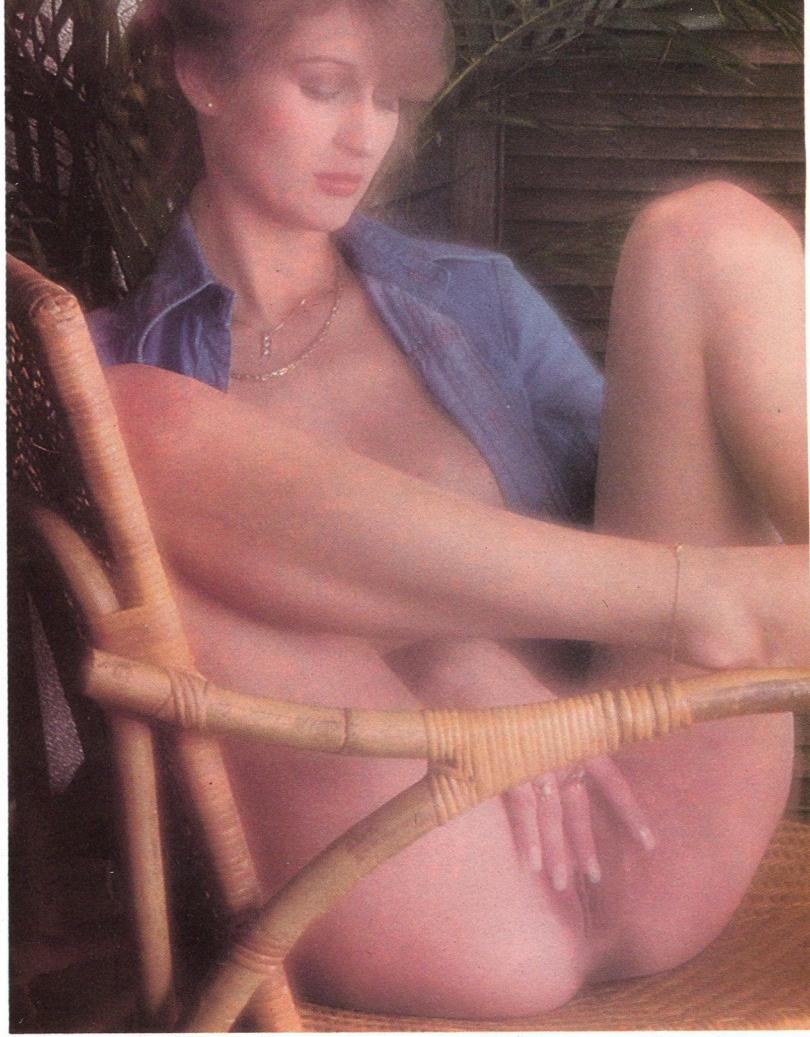

PHOTOGRAPHY BY JOHN COPELAND

Cherry also admits to an interest in music. "I love men who play some instrument—guitar, piano, flute. I don't care if it's Bob Dylan or George Gershwin. There's just something about a handsome Texan making beautiful music that always gets me."

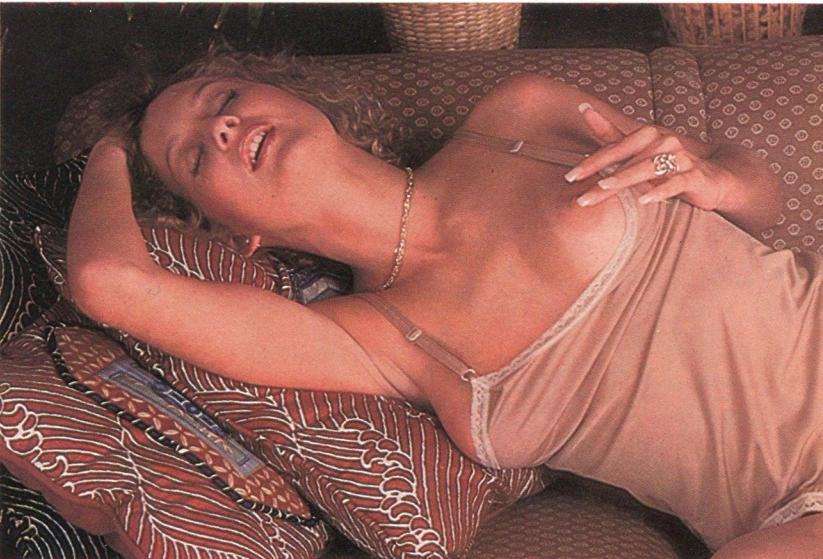

"I'm also attracted to guys who have a special feeling for animals, who ride horses and like dogs. I'd love to have a huge family someday, with lots of kids and dogs and cats, and me barefoot, cooking great meals, taking care of a whole brood. That's if I don't become a famous photographer, of course, and go traveling around the world. I guess I have a lot of fantasies, but that's what keeps me going."

Cherry says that Austin has the best bars and music in the state, "maybe the whole country. I'd never want to leave here. It's the perfect place to be meeting people all the time—friendly and down-to-earth people, no airs. I want to capture all of it on film."
